Set on the 16th floor of a high-rise, this 3BHK apartment is a striking blend of modern minimalism, mid-century charm, and personal expression. Designed as a canvas of storytelling through space, the home beautifully balances sleek forms with bold colour, warmth, and lived-in comfort.

At the entrance, a tall shoe cabinet with vertical slatted teak detailing combines elegance with utility. A built-in bench with soft grey cushions provides comfort. The artwork above is a framed puzzle of a colourful temple façade that adds a quirky cultural reference.

From here, the eye is drawn to the dining space, where an eclectic artwork echoes the homeowners' personality and playful, creative spirit. The open living and dining area forms the vibrant heart of the home. Anchored by an eye-catching mustard yellow sofa, the space exudes energy while maintaining cohesion. Olive green wall panels add depth and drama, while rust-orange dining chairs enhance the palette.

On one side of the living area, a floating TV unit keeps the look light and contemporary, offering smart storage without visual bulk. Beside it, a compact puja unit with slatted teak shutters blends spiritual significance with modern design. Together, the floating units enhance openness, keeping the space grounded yet airy. To seat extra guests without crowding, a pair of leather pouffes tuck neatly under the floating TV unit, ready to pull out when needed.

Furniture and lighting nod to mid-century modern design, with clean silhouettes and tactile details that lend the home timeless appeal. Across it all, teak wood finishes bring cohesion, adding warmth and quiet elegance.

A standout intervention is the reimagined kitchen partition: the original static divide was replaced with a collapsible teak panel, adding both flexibility and a sense of connection.

The children's bedroom embraces a light, whimsical feel. Sunlight pours through a wide bay window, illuminating a custom bunk bed framed by soft-toned carpentry, while playful wallpaper adds a splash of colour and sparks imagination without cluttering the space.

The master bedroom embraces a serene, restorative palette. A fluted teak wall panel behind the bed brings visual texture and continuity from the rest of the home, while rust-toned accents and a floating dressing-study unit blend beauty with functionality. Textured walls in calming greens and beige round out the space, creating a restful atmosphere that's perfect for slowing down.

The clients' openness to colour and character resulted in a home that perfectly reflects their warm, vibrant personalities. With one half of the couple a trained architect, the process was smooth and built on trust. Clear requirements and mutual confidence made designing this home for the young family a truly collaborative and delightful experience.
